profile

Timothy is a lawyer in McMillan's advocacy and litigation group. He is developing a civil, commercial and regulatory litigation practice in the firm's Ottawa office. Timothy advises and represents clients in a range of industries regarding commercial and contract disputes; regulatory prosecutions; international trade; government and public policy; product liability claims and procurement matters.

Timothy has appeared before various federal and provincial courts and tribunals in complex proceedings and regulatory matters. He has experience in alternative dispute resolution, including cross-border commercial arbitration.

A competitive curler, runner and tennis player at the junior level, Timothy now competes at the recreational level as a member of the Elmdale Tennis Club and the Ottawa Curling Club. He has completed several half marathons and also enjoys skiing, golf and yoga. Timothy is passionate about teaching and became an NCCP certified curling coach as a teenager. He loves introducing first-time curlers, both young and old, to the sport and training other curlers on how to be instructors in learn-to-curl programs across Ontario.

Timothy obtained his law degree at the University of Ottawa and is also a proud alumnus of the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs at Carleton University and the University of Prince Edward Island. He is fluently bilingual.
