Joseph Berger is a strategic and tireless advocate with extensive experience in administrative law, sports law, professional regulation, and tribunal-level litigation. Joseph's calm, thoughtful, and measured approach allows him to navigate complex and sensitive legal disputes while advancing his clients' best interests with precision and care.

Before joining Stieber Berlach, Joseph practiced for several years as in-house prosecution counsel at two major provincial professional regulators, as well as at a leading litigation boutique where his work focused on regulatory prosecution and professional discipline. Since 2024, Joseph has served as an Instructor in the Osgoode Professional Development Certificate in Health Law Program, where he contributes his regulatory expertise to the training of emerging and established professionals.

Joseph has appeared extensively before courts, tribunals, and regulatory bodies across Ontario. Since joining Stieber Berlach, he has developed a rapidly expanding sports-law practice. He has represented universities, professional colleges, national sports organizations, provincial sports organizations, and individuals involved in sport across a full spectrum of regulatory, disciplinary, and civil proceedings.

Joseph is a member of The Advocates' Society, and he has been recognized by Best Lawyers in Canada: Ones to Watch™ since 2025, reflecting his strong reputation and commitment to excellence in advocacy.

Joseph is pleased to assist individuals involved in both amateur and professional athletics in navigating investigations, complaints, regulatory issues, and dispute resolution matters arising within Canada's national sport system. Joseph brings study judgement and strong advocacy skills to every file, understanding the personal and professional stakes involved for each of his clients.
