

Danielle Lappage

Danielle Lappage was born and raised in small town Olds, Alberta. She received a BA (2013) and MA (2015) from Simon Fraser University (SFU), and a Law Degree from the University of Calgary (2020). She is currently a solicitor with the BC Ministry of Attorney General, Legal Services Branch.

Danielle is a former National Team wrestler. She represented Canada at multiple international events, including the 2016 and 2020 (2021) Olympic Games. She completed her varsity wrestling career at SFU, where she won three university national titles. She was a member of the Canadian National Wrestling Team from 2006-2022.

During her wrestling career, Danielle advocated for and represented her fellow athletes in various capacities, including being an Athlete Representative on the Alberta Amateur Wrestling Board of Directors and the Wrestling Canada Safe Sport Task Force. Since retiring from wrestling, Danielle has continued to be a part of amateur sport and the sport of wrestling. Currently Danielle is a volunteer coach with SFU's Women's Wrestling Team.

In her spare time, you can find Danielle doing something active, hanging out with her new daughter or at the rink watching her husband's hockey team.
